Paris, July 27.—The Yin Kow correspondent of the Matin says that the Japanese entered New Chwang at five o'clock in the morning and hauled down the Russian commercial flag on the residence of the governor. The Japanese standard was posted.

The Chinese flags are flying from the neighboring buildings and the custom houses.

THE VLADIVOSTOCK SQUADRON.

Tokio, July 28.—The Vladivostock squadron was seen sixty miles off Tokio Bay at dawn this morning.

VICTORIOUS GENERAL OKU.

Tokio, July 28.—In a daring night attack against Russia's forces estimated at five divisions, with one hundred guns, General Oku drove the enemy from their line of defence, south of Ta Tche Kiao.

Advancing on Sunday, General Oku found a superior force confronting him and that a heavy artillery fire from the enemy was checking his men.

He thereupon decided to attempt a night attack. This was successful, the Japanese troops hustling the Russians into retreat to Ta Tche Kiao. The Japanese had eight hundred casualties. The Taku Shan army fought and won a separate action on Friday, July 22nd, at Rauling, losing 31 men. The Russians left 14 dead.

Peace River Country

Free Press:

From all who can speak from actual knowledge of the Peace River region gained by residence there, the most emphatic denials have come in regard to the misleading Macoun report, which is a mere expression of unwarranted opinion based upon imperfect knowledge of a small portion of that great and fertile region. The mass of convincing testimony as to the resources and actual conditions of life in the Peace River country which has come from the settlers there is materially added to by a most interesting and valuable letter written by Mr. H. H. Lawrence, at present residing at Belmont, and published in the Western Progress, of Melita. Mr. Lawrence has a ranch at Vermilion, where the first sod was turned in 1887. He speaks from experience gained in living in that part of the Peace River country over six hundred miles north from the International boundary and midway between Hudson's Bay and the Pacific Ocean.

After relating how brooding friends sought to discourage him in 1887 from taking up the location for his ranch and mill on the north side of the Peace river by saying, as Mr. Macoun says, that "there never would be any grain to amount to anything raised on the north side of the Peace," and that the best he could hope for was "a good crop now and again, but nothing sure," Mr. Lawrence writes:

"Once, only, have we had grain killed outright by frost in July, that was in '98, some on low land, wheat and barley, a few acres of which was cut for feed and proved a paying crop even for this, as it made extra nice feed, being cut soon after the frost. This frost was only local and only on part of the farm. At other times we have been visited by the same in August, on late sowing, making some good pig feed.

"In all these years we have not lost a harvest, nor missed having a crop of grain and potatoes, and since the first crop after the flood, plenty, yes, abundance; starvation driven out of that part entirely, never to return. Children do not call for bread, nor pigs squeak in vain for their rations. You would listen a long while on Sunday morning before hearing the call of hunger from the cow stable.

"And it does seem strange after what Mr. Macoun saw at Vermilion, and plenty, the ability to keep up such prosperity on every hand, peace the standard of our live stock, horses, cattle, pigs, hens, etc., without much inbreeding, with so few settlers taking an interest in those on right lines, and the fresh supply so far away. Nothing was said about the dairy interests, while thousands of pounds of butter are made yearly at Vermilion, and the Indians love this article, as well do the white men; but he does say that flour and beef are cheap. The cause of this is not explained, nor the part the small mills played in lowering the prices of flour. And also at the same time of the Klondike rush in '97-'98, when so many were wintering all along the way from Athabasca Landing to Fort Simpson. He does not tell why these that were out of reach by the influence of these antiquated grist mills that used the tallow candle instead of the electric light, should pay $35 or more for 100 pounds, and beef also at a high rate, while within reach of these same mills, cheap flour, to be milled at Little Slave Lake, for 25 cents per pound; at Peace River Landing, 76 miles further on, at 27 cents per pound; while here at Vermilion, 276 miles still further away, a better class of bacon selling at 15 cents per pound; yes, I may as better for all classes and conditions of people call for the ranch bacon and hams, and will hardly take the imported at any price, if the Native, as they call it, can be procured. This growing demand for bacon, and as our ranch is the only place it is made at Vermilion, has caused us to prepare for a larger output, a large pig-house was built last fall, and 125 spring pigs wintered."

Further on in his letter, Mr. Lawrence writes:

"When we see a locality isolated as is Vermilion, P. R., from all other places, where in time of need by famine or shortness of food in winter no supplies could be procured for man or beast, and still for us to be able to keep up among our few helpers the amount of stock and kinds as do ours, and keep them from feeling even the first pangs of starvation, surely such must be no ordinary country. Neither is it. And when we think of what we have seen and know, then read the best that we have ever seen written or told by others, it can truthfully be said of this north country as by one of old, that 'the half has not been told.' Instead of just being able to successfully go forward with ordinary farm work where we were located, we thought that even under less favorable circumstances as regards soil and climate success would still have followed the effort."

And, in conclusion, Mr. Lawrence speaks of the action of the Western members of Parliament in regard to the Macoun report, which Conservative members of the Agriculture Committee of the House sought to have printed and circulated:

"In the face of all this that Mr. Macoun might have been—to try so hard to make out the difficulty of procuring even a good living for any 'but the man who would be satisfied with little.' Veritable bosh! And isn't any wonder that our Northwest members of Parliament took exception to this report—challenged the truth of the statements? These old timers, who had seen the effects produced for many years by huge monopolies in their own localities and constituencies, and would rise and say, 'Go no farther, the New Land of the north for the man who has the spunk to go and take it. Monopoly, keep back.' Yes, we honor them for the stand they took. As honorable men they could not keep silent and see such a fraud take root and grow. While we wish Mr. Macoun well, we also can but think he has taken a step backward."

In the years to come, the Macoun report, if it is ever mentioned at all, will be referred to with a smile, as the reports of a few decades ago disparaging the resources and possibilities of Western Canada are now occasionally referred to.

Japan and Russia

By Henry Clews in Harper's Weekly.

The Russo-Japanese war has been full of surprises and has given rise to a vast amount of discussion as to its influence and consequences and the relations of the rest of the world to the two contending nations. It has, therefore, been a great international educator, all the more so because the strife has been so swift and deadly.

It has exposed the astonishing inefficiency and weakness of both the army and navy of Russia, that before were feared by other powers, and has shown the superior strength, mobility, and military and naval skill and pushing force of Japan. One result is that the prestige of Russia, both on sea and land, has suffered very severely, so severely that it will probably never be fully regained.

On the other hand, the prestige which Japan gained in its war with China has been immensely increased. We see a reflection of it in the avidity with which its ten million sterling loan was recently taken, both in New York and London, half being allotted to each city. The amount, equivalent to fifty millions of dollars, was many times over-subscribed.

The great success of this loan was a practical pledge of international amity between the three countries concerned—England, America and Japan—for there is a tie of interest established between a country that sells its bonds, and the countries to which it sells them. Therefore, the larger our holdings of Japanese bonds become, the more we shall be interested in the welfare of Japan, and other conditions being equal, the more friendly and obligated Japan will feel towards us.

Consequently, our investments in her securities will be productive of international good feeling. They will thus tend to stimulate our trade with Japan, as well as to induce Japanese investments in this country, for we are geographically nearer than Europe to her open door.

The fact that our sympathies are with Japan in her contest with Russia is very largely due to the liberal and progressive open door policy of Japan, and the narrow, restricted and shut-door policy of Russia, particularly as shown by her arbitrary, grasping and encroaching course in Manchuria.

Her persistence in remaining there after repeated promises to withdraw constituted a breach of faith towards Japan, and clearly indicated her intention to retain it as a province and stepping stone to further territorial acquisitions. Yet her claims on Manchuria were merely based on certain rights over the Manchurian railway, a very unsubstantial foundation and justification for her pretensions and occupancy of the country.

It was that unjustifiable occupation of Manchuria and practical refusal to release her hold upon it that forced Japan to make war upon her as an aggressor and practically an invader. Japan wanted peace with honor and long and patiently conferred and negotiated with Russia in the hope of averting war, and only resorted to it when Russia's studied procrastination and subterfuge became so wearisome and exasperating that they exhausted patience, and patience ceased to be a virtue.

Russia's object was to tire out Japan without forcing her into war, her belief being that Japan would never dare to fight so great a power, much as she might, by Russian injustice, be Continued on page 5.

Large Items Passed Without Discussion

Yesterday's proceedings in the House included the passing of a considerable part of the estimates of the Department of the Interior, including the grant in respect of North West Government and in respect of Government of the Yukon. These items were agreed to without discussion.

Dog Fish Discussion And Policy

A large amount of the time of the day was taken up with a discussion brought on by the leader of the Opposition in regard to a bounty for the destruction of dog-fish on the Atlantic coast. It appears that this fish, which is not a food fish, is very destructive to the food fishes, and as the dog-fish have increased very greatly in recent years, they have caused very serious loss to the fishermen who depend upon the catch of food fishes. Mr. Borden's suggestion was that a bounty of 1-4c per fish be given to fishermen for catching dog-fish and a bonus of $2.00 per ton to fertilizer manufacturers using dog-fish as fertilizer. He justified his demand by the argument that the fisheries of the maritime provinces had received perhaps less consideration than any other industry of equal importance in Canada. Although suggesting the payment of a bounty for the destruction of dog-fish and indicating his belief that the maritime provinces were hardly used if it were not granted, he had not sufficient confidence either in the merits of his proposals or in the favor with which it was viewed by his followers to offer it as a motion.

The Minister of Marine agreed that the increase of dog-fish was a serious menace to the Atlantic fisheries. The Government proposed to add the establishment of reduction works where dog-fish oil would be extracted and the remainder worked up into fertilizer with a view to giving the dog-fish a commercial value.

McPherson, of Vancouver, said that two factories for the production of oil from dog-fish were in operation on the Pacific coast and were operated successfully.

Dundonald's Recall

The cable dispatches of July 19th from London indicate that in his action at the demonstration at Toronto Lord Dundonald overshot the mark in turning the occasion into a political party advantage. The matter was the subject of a motion and discussion in the British House of Commons.

Mr. Lloyd-George, Liberal, moved the adjournment in order to call attention to the conduct of Lord Dundonald in taking part in a political agitation against the Government of Canada. It was a purely political agitation with Lord Dundonald as its centre. The case was similar to that of Sir Redvers Buller.

Winston Churchill, formerly Conservative, but now Independent, and who served under Buller before Ladysmith, seconded the motion. He said that Lord Dundonald should have been at once recalled by the British Government. No one could deny that he was being exploited by the Opposition party in Canada for party purposes.

Mr. Arnold Foster, Secretary of State for War, objected to the discussion, but speaking on the question, said: "Lord Dundonald went to Canada as an officer of the Canadian Government, and to one had imputed any misconduct to him other than want of judgment. Not being in agreement with the Canadian Government, the latter dismissed him at once when he became a British officer on half-pay. Lord Dundonald could stand as a member of the Canadian Commons and could not be deprived of the right to take an active part in public life, but Mr. Foster, believed it to be undesirable for any officer to take part in public controversies; and the War Office had informed Lord Dundonald that his conduct was undesirable and had requested him to return to England to be heard in his own defence. He had, therefore, requested Lord Dundonald to return home and not take any part in political controversies.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, Liberal Leader of the Commons, said it was a grave piece of bad taste for Lord Dundonald to act as he had, but the Secretary of State for War had taken a course of which the Opposition approved in bringing him home.

Evidently Lord Dundonald has succeeded in making his position thoroughly understood, even in England; and it is satisfactory to see that both parties there appreciate his conduct at its face value, and speak and act accordingly.

Ottawa, July 21st, 1904.

TWO CENT RAILWAY RATE

During the debate in the House of Commons on July 14th on Mr. MacLean's proposal to fix railway passenger rates on railways earning $3,000 per mile per year at 2 cents a mile, Mr. Oliver spoke as follows: Hansard report:

Mr. OLIVER. I think the hon. member for East York (Mr. Maclean) is entitled to a great deal of credit for having brought this question before parliament so persistently both in this and previous sessions. I think it must be generally agreed that if passengers can be carried profitably at a two cent rate under similar conditions in the States, it is a fair proposition that they might be carried at the same rate in Canada. There is no doubt that in Canada we are entitled to all the benefits that come from the operation of railroads which exist very largely by reason of public moneys paid them by the people of the country. At the same time I think it would be fair to consider that last year parliament established a railway commission empowered to deal with the question of railway passenger rates, and was given almost unlimited powers in this matter. I think it would be well to wait and see what the railway commission will do in this matter before parliament takes action directly. While I have no doubt that the hon. member for East York has gone very carefully into this subject of railway rates and is probably satisfied in his own mind of the correctness of his contention, a large majority of us have not done so. At any rate, it must be admitted that the members of the railway commission are in a position, and it is part of their duty to inform themselves on this subject, while many in this House have not been able so to inform themselves. I am prepared to say that if the railway commission does not in good time take action on this question it will be necessary then for the House to take action. Certainly circumstances look in that direction. At the same time, the danger of taking drastic action without due consideration is evidenced in some degree by the results on the Intercolonial, and we have a deficit of half a million dollars there. Therefore I think the rate on the Intercolonial is rather an argument against the proposition of the hon. gentleman than in favor of it.

Another point worthy of consideration is that there are different classes of rates. There is the first-class rate and the second-class rate. I do not know how the reduction of the first-class rate to two cents might affect the second-class rate. At the present time people who can afford to pay the high rate, those who cannot afford to pay the high rate pay a lower rate. I do not think it would be right that those who could afford the higher rate should be permitted to travel at the lower rate, and those who get the benefit of the still lower rate at the present time be compelled to pay a higher rate than they do now. That is, however, a question that could be dealt with by the commission, and it is one that I do not consider myself in a position at the present time to deal with to the extent of endorsing the hon. gentleman's proposition.

Another thing that inspires me with doubt in regard to this matter was the remark made by the hon. member that if proportionate reductions were made on roads of heavy travel he would not object to a corresponding increase of the rates on roads where the travel was proportionately light. Representing a part of the country where settlement is sparse and where the travel on newly constructed roads is likely to be light for a few years I am afraid I could hardly follow him in that proposition.

Mr. MACLEAN. Don't you pay four cents there now?

Mr. OLIVER. We used to pay five cents, but it is reduced to four, and in Manitoba it is three cents. At the same time, if the rate is fixed according to traffic, it is perfectly clear that a new road through a lightly settled country would possibly

Mr. OLIVER. I am afraid that the basis is perhaps hardly fair when you work it out to a conclusion and apply it under all conditions all over the country. Therefore I cannot for the present take the responsibility of voting for the amendment of the hon. member, although I think he is entitled to a great deal of credit in his effort; and if a remedy is not found by the railway commission in due time it will be then necessary for parliament to take some direct action he has suggested, even perhaps without as full information as is desirable. For we must all agree, in line with the discussion we have had, that a public grievance requires a public remedy.

ASSIST THE FACTORY

Editor Bulletin:—In your issue of the 27th instant, I notice the report of the proceedings of the last city council meeting, among which was a communication from the Berlin Cigar Factory seeking assistance from our town to establish its factory here, and that the matter had been referred to the town council's finance committee.

As you are aware, I have been in the same business here for the last three years and yearly pay out quite a sum in wages for my help, and I did not ask any assistance to start, what has turned out by sheer hard work a cigar factory, the product of which is a credit to this or any other town. Charity, I should think, should begin at home, and if any bonus in this line is to be given, I am entitled to it.

I am prepared to put on as many hands as the Berlin cigar factory, if any bonus is to be given.

Your kindly inserting this will oblige.

Raging Bush Fires

Frank Alta, July 25th.—There is a tremendous forest fire in progress east of this place. The little town of Bellevue has been almost half destroyed and twelve cottages are in ruins. The recently opened mine at that place is still intact, and it is expected that the people will escape damage. The flames are being driven forward by a heavy wind from the south, but it is confidently expected that the Old Man river will offer a sufficient barrier to block its further progress. The property of the railway company has escaped damage.

Fernie, B. C., July 25th.—Disastrous forest fires raged Saturday around here and far into the night. Again and again the town was threatened, but the people quenched the incipient flames in every direction. Fire threatened the residential part of the town not wiped out by the April flames. A wide stretch of bottom forest lands between the town and Elk river was patrolled by hundreds of men.

Sparks and burning embers were carried more than a mile. Twice the fire got beyond the control and it looked as if the town was doomed. On the west side the Elk Lumber company's well filled yards were attacked, but were saved by the fine water system. The stables on the mountain side were burned and two million feet of logs, all the season's cut, were destroyed.

At Moccasin, B. C., the brewery owned by A. Mutz, of Fernie, was burned. The fire started from the right of way along the Great Northern railway.

Rosthern Tragedy

Saskatoon Phoenix:

A tragic ending to a police court case happened seventeen miles east of Rosthern on Tuesday morning. Just between five and seven o'clock, when a Galician, Ounfry Tokaryk, committed suicide by hanging himself. His eleven year old son was the only one in the house at the time. He and his father had retired to bed the evening previous and early in the morning he missed his father, and commenced a search, eventually finding him hanging from a pole running across two partitions of the house with a rope around his neck. His feet were only three inches from the ground. The boy immediately ran to his brother's house near by. His sister-in-law returned with him but the sight frightened her and by the time she returned again with her husband life was extinct. Tokaryk was about fifty years old. His mind was slightly deranged and he has acted strangely on different occasions. His wife was sentenced at the police court last week to three months' imprisonment for theft, and believing himself to be disgraced he committed the fatal act. Dr. Stewart held an inquest.

Col. Gregory's Retirement Discussed

Bulletin Special Dispatch.

Ottawa, July 28.—Most of the day was occupied in discussing the retirement of Colonel Gregory from the militia regiment. He had held the position for the full term and a year's extension. He wanted two year's more and was not granted it. He then made trouble about the promotion of Major Glasgow to second in command and was retired. No motion was made or vote taken.

The public works estimates were then taken up and met with the usual obstruction by ten to fifteen members of the opposition. The leader was absent after speaking on the Gregory case.

Terrible Drowning Accident in Southern Alberta Whereby Four Young Persons are lost

Bulletin Special Dispatch.

MacLeod, July 28.—Four people were drowned in the Old Man River near here Tuesday night. Two sisters, Nellie and Katie Higgins, aged 20 and 16, respectively, their brother Eddie, aged six, and their girl friend, Mary Robinson, aged 21, all met their death while attempting to make the ford here of the Old Man River. The current, swollen by the heavy rains, was too strong for them, and they were swept down stream, disappearing from sight before help could arrive.

Two bodies, those of Mary Robinson and Katie Higgins, have been recovered and search parties are actively engaged looking for the other two. Much sympathy is expressed here for this appalling blow which has suddenly overtaken two highly respected families.

CHOICE HOMESTEAD LANDS

An unsettled district of Alberta that is receiving a large share of attention at present is that territory lying east of the C. & E. line in the vicinity of Didsbury. The quashing of the Kneehill railway charter has thrown open for homestead entry several whole townships which otherwise would have been held by the railway.

This is reported to be extra choice land and is within easy reach from the railway. Homesteads may be secured 25 miles east from Didsbury, Olds, or Bowden. The land is of a rich, deep soil. Good water is obtained at from 12 to 15 feet. The whole district is reported underlain with splendid coal, which is easily mined in the coales. The Bulletin was shown samples of timothy, wheat, rye and barley of this year's growth which are certainly splendid samples. The wheat is ripening and will be fit to cut in two weeks at least. Hay is reported to be a heavy crop all over the district out as far as the Red River and the soil has not dried out to any serious extent. What settlers are already in the district are doing well and their stock and crops are in the best of condition.

Parties wishing to locate near each other, find themselves able to secure homesteads side by side. Land Guide Smith, Dominion lands sub-agent at Didsbury, is looking after the locating of lands in this district, and is showing large numbers over it.

provoked to do so. But Russia has been undeceived and had her eyes opened at great cost.

Japan has good reason to feel proud of her exploits and achievements in this great contest. Not alone is physical strength necessary to success in war, but science, money, and an intelligent application and utilization of resources. Although Japan had a great advantage over Russia, it being so much nearer her base of supplies, she had still a very formidable adversary.

Yet this purely Oriental nation showed, to the wonder of the world, its superiority over its powerful foe from the beginning of the heroic struggle to drive away an intruder whose ultimate design was to accomplish its destruction as an independent nation.

Against this aggressor the Japanese people are united to a man, with a patriotic zeal and devotion that makes every one of them not only willing to fight and sacrifice his property, for his country, but to lay down his life for it, deeming death in its defence of itself glorious. Such patriotic willingness to sacrifice everything for the national cause, makes every Japanese soldier and sailor much more than the equal in strength and resolution and fighting force, of each of his antagonists. He knows and feels that his family will be well provided for in his absence, and that his country is in the right, but that, with justice on its side, its rights and possibly even its existence are still gravely menaced.

So he proves by his prowess that "Thrice is he armed who hath his quarrel just."

Whether in the army or navy the Japanese are active, energetic, fearless and determined and these qualities combined with their love of country, have done wonders against the Russians, who are mostly unwilling hirelings without a spark of patriotism, or men who are in heart hostile to their own government. The military and naval tactics, discipline, and equipment of the Japanese are also superior to those of Russia, and their movements far quicker and distinguished by greater dash and spirit.

Their officers, too, are well trained. Most of them have been educated in the best colleges and naval and military academies in this country and Europe. Indeed, the almost universal spread of education among the Japanese has been very remarkable. Their desire has been to learn all that the rest of the world knows, and so place themselves in a position to utilize their knowledge, besides gratifying a laudable curiosity. European and American colleges are, and have been for many years, thickly sprinkled with Japanese students and Admiral Togo was educated for the navy at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Japan has, therefore, a great bulwark of strength in the devoted patriotism, education and intelligence of her people, for she has become an educated country, the percentage of illiteracy there being small. Yet the marvellous revolution by which she emerged from Oriental exclusiveness and obscurity and gradually developed into her present national and international importance only began in 1860. Her transformation reads like a romance.

In that year, following our naval expedition to Japan, under the command of Commodore Perry, who in 1853 made a provisional treaty with her for opening certain ports, Japan sent an embassy to the United States. It came by our invitation, on one of our ships-of-war. This was really the beginning of modern Japanese intercourse with the rest of the world and its wondrous change from eastern to western civilization. The Dutch traders and missionaries, who long before, were tolerated and then massacred at Nagasaki had been almost forgotten.

There were in Japan in 1860, as there had been from time immemorial, two emperors, one spiritual and the other temporal, known, respectively, as the Mikado and the Tycoon, and a host of feudal lords as powerful as those of England in the days of King John, when history was made at Runnymede. These feudal lords, the Samurai, carried swords, and had the power of life or death by harakiri over their servants and vassals, and regarded the trading and working classes as inferior beings, of no social importance. They were entirely subservient to these feudal lords—the Samurai—and had no political voice or power whatever.

The change from that feudal age to this in government, manners, and customs, solely by the will of Japan herself, is entirely unexampled in all history. But it was a grand and wise progressive movement by her ruling class which brought Japan from her ancient isolation into the bright light of western civilization, and made her one of the foremost nations of the world. Now her government is representative like that of the British parliament or the congress of the United States.

Oldest Town in Canada

Toronto Globe:

The birthday of the oldest settlement of white men in Canada, and the second oldest on the continent, was fittingly celebrated on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. Three years before Quebec had seen its first civilized habitants, and fifteen years before the Pilgrim Fathers landed at Plymouth, there were the beginnings of a town at the head of Annapolis Basin, a land-locked inlet of the Bay of Fundy. That was two hundred and ninety-nine years ago, and from that time till now there has been a permanent settlement, first known by the sovereign name of Port Royal, and later anglicized as Annapolis Royal, the City of Queen Anne.

A year before that, however, or an even three centuries ago, Annapolis Basin saw its first European sail, and gave of its virgin charm to cheer the hearts of certain storm-tossed French explorers from overseas. The exact calendar date of that first excursion, where tourists still go, and are still charmed, is a bit uncertain, but only to the extent of a few days. It was on a day in the third week of June, 1604, and the most accurate counting has agreed upon June 21 as the actual anniversary of that natal visit. June is the month of pleasant sights in Nova Scotia, and it may be that the voyagers of three hundred years ago found something of the same fresh beauty then, none the less pleasant because at that time wild.

That little French sloop had some brave Frenchmen on board. The man in charge was Sieur De Monts, who had come with the authority of Henry of Navarre as King's Lieutenant in Acadie. No one knew then just what Acadie was. Its boundaries were no more definite than Belle Isle on the north and Chesapeake Bay on the south; but it was part of this expedition's business to spy out the country in the King's name. With De Monts there was Samuel Champlain, then a young and untamed man, but later to outdistance his leader as a founder of Canada. These two men had besides them 120 soldiers, agriculturists and settlers, all French, but some of them Catholic and some of them Huguenot. From its earliest beginnings this Canada of ours has truly been a land of free and mixed religions.

The entrance to Annapolis Basin from the Bay of Fundy is through a narrow break in the sea-wall known as Digby Gut. In Champlain's journal he tells of their surprise and pleasure on entering this passage and finding a basin "where two thousand vessels could be anchored in safety." But the shores, beautiful as they were, failed to satisfy the explorers as a fit place for settlement. They came, they saw, but they sailed away again.

Across the Bay of Fundy, at the mouth of the St. Croix River, they found an island, and there they settled—the first white man's settlement in Canada. They built cabins, sowed rye, chopped down trees, hunted bears, and watched for Indians. And then the winter came; and it was a bad winter. Our Lady of the Snows was perverse in three days, and on the first introduction to her she turned a very cold shoulder. The trouble was that the Frenchmen did not know what a winter in this country meant, and their preparations were inadequate. 35 of their number died during the winter, and when spring came the survivors left Roquet Island and sailed across the bay again to Port Royal.

Clearing of land and house-building began again. Champlain built himself a house for the summer some distance from the foot, and thus set the pace for the owner of the first summer cottage in Canada. A part of its outdoor equipment was a private fish pond. De Monts went to France in the autumn, returning with the Baron de Routinacourt, in the following July. Meanwhile the little colony had had a second winter of discontent and suffering, and there never was more timely luck than that brought in the returning ship from France—the salvation. Indeed, of the infant Port Royal, on De Monts' second return home, control of the colony was given to Routinacourt, who during the summer of 1605 strengthened the defences of the fort, laid out gardens, erected new buildings and made various other preparations for their third winter.

That next winter, 1606-07, was a marked advance upon the previous two. It seems to have even been a merry one, for an organization titled "The Order of Good Times" flourished, despite many difficulties. Of this order, the first social club in North America, the Chénak-Savary History of Annapolis says:

"The order consisted of fifteen members, who were furnished with regalia and other insignia of office, and forms of procedure were instituted for the guidance of its proceedings. Each member in turn became the caterer to his brethren, a plan which excited so much emulation among them that each endeavored to excel his predecessor in office, in the variety, profusion and the quality of the viands procured for the table during his term of office."

Parkman also says: "Routinacourt's table groined beneath the luxuries of the winter forests, flesh of moose, caribou and deer, beaver, otter and hare, bears and wild-cats, with ducks, geese, grouse and plover; sturgeon, too, and trout and fish innumerable, speared through the ice or drawn from the depths of the neighboring sea. . . . The invited guests were Indian chiefs. Those of humbler degree, warriors, squaws and children, sat on the floor or crouched together in the corners of the hall eagerly awaiting their portion of a biscuit or of bread, a novel and much-coveted luxury."

These were the beginnings of old Annapolis. With the first three years the name of Champlain is closely connected, for though not the official leader, he was one of the moving spirits and the historian of enterprise. The celebrations this week at Annapolis and St. John are, indeed, being referred to as the Champlain tricentennaries. After 1607 Champlain's name is associated no longer with Quebec.

For the next six years Annapolis made slow progress, and for a short time was deserted, the fort being left to the care of a faithful Indian chief. In 1613 the settlement was destroyed, and all the buildings burned by Captain Argall, from the English colony at Virginia. The Port Royal colonists sought refuge with their Indian friends and continued their modest farming in the near vicinity but the fortunes of France in Acadie seemed at a low ebb. In 1621 an attempt was made under authority of the British King to make a Scotch settlement at Port Royal, a scheme proposed by Sir William Alexander; but it was not successful. England's first experiment in colonization in the New World was a disappointment, and ten years later Acadie was given back to France.

Port Royal served as a foothold for England and France for the next eighty years. Seized by Sedgwick, of Charlottetown, in 1653; restored to France in 1667, at which time it had a population of about sixty families; captured again by Philips, with a Boston expedition, in 1690; quietly recaptured by the French in the following year; attacked by the English twice in 1707, but ably defended; once more attacked and captured, in 1710 by General Nicholson, and finally handed over in October of that year as a British possession—all this made the history of early Annapolis a page of many records.

Under British rule Annapolis was for forty years the capital of the Province, and its history was the history of Nova Scotia. In 1748, however, the seat of government was removed to Halifax. Government in those days was by Governor and Council, and in 1735 a Court of Justice was established.

The manner of justice dealt out by this court may have been sound, but to modern ways of thinking it was peculiar. Witness the following sentence upon a petty offender:—

"The punishment therefore inflicted upon thee is to sit upon a gallows three days, half an hour each day, with a rope about thy neck, and a paper upon your breast, wherein shall be wrote in capital letters, 'AUDACIOUS VILLAIN,' and afterwards thou art to be whipt at a cart's tail from the prison up to the uttermost house of the town, and from hence back again to the prison house, receiving each hundred paces five stripes upon your bare back with a cat-o-nine-tails, and then thou art to be turned over for a sinner."

Annapolis to-day is a county town of some 1,200 population, pretty, fairly prosperous and well-built. The hills and the basin and the marshes are still there, and imaginatively inclined visitors are wont to picture to themselves the things that happened in the long-ago. Yet there is nothing ancient on the face of Annapolis. It has been twice scourged by fire, and the present town is comparatively new. In no way is it noticeably different from hundreds of other country towns, and the visitor hearing of it as the oldest town in Canada sometimes wonders at its commonplace up-to-dateness. Yet its chief interest is undoubtedly historic, and it proves its title good by producing a number of indisputable landmarks and relics.

Close beside the main street and bordering the river is a large commons of thirty acres, the garrison grounds of days gone by. There are earthworks and moats, an old well, a powder magazine, saltpetre and barracks there, enough to prove to any the historicity of the place. These fortifications are still in excellent repair and seem to have been admirably built. The fort was built on this site in 1640, the first French fortifications having been several miles down the river. The stone of which the magazine was made was brought from France and has withstood the wear of centuries. Local tradition has it that the French used an underground passage from this magazine to the river front. The barracks, still used as a keeper's residence, was built by the British authorities, who for many years after Nicholson's capture maintained a full military establishment at the Annapolis garrison.

To the man of a military turn, the fortifications at Annapolis are of very great interest as revealing the thoroughness and solidity of the old-time soldiers' methods. Unfortunately some of the buildings that stood up to a generation ago were so injured by reckless hunting and vandalism that it was necessary to tear them down, and for this reason the old blockhouse, a second magazine, and an officers' barracks are no more. A few years ago the importance of preserving the fortifications was realized by the local authorities, and pressed upon the Federal Government, and something has since been done in the way of restoration. The erection of a statue to De Monts, by Hamilton McCarthy, the foundation stone of which was laid on Wednesday, will still further increase the interest of the historic field.

It was an anniversary very well worth celebrating. Annapolis shares with Quebec the honors of old age in Canada, and has the greater honor of the two by several years seniority.

The Canadian Northwest Homestead Regulations

Any even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Territories, excepting 8 and 16, which has not been homesteaded, or reserved to provide wood lots for settlers, or for other purposes, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age to the extent of one quarter section, of 160 acres more or less.

ENTRY.—Entry may be made per the district in which the land to be taken is situated, or if the homesteader desires, he may, on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situated, receive authority for some one to make entry for him. A fee of $10.00 is charged for a homestead entry.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES.—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required by the provisions of the Dominion Lands Act and the amendments thereto, to perform the conditions connected therewith, under one of the following upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years:

(1) At least six months' residence years.
(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased) of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, reside upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, the requirements of the Act are satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If a settler has obtained a patent for his homestead, or a certificate for the issue of such patent, countersigned in the manner prescribed by this Act, and has obtained entry for a second homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by residence upon the first homestead, if the second homestead is in the vicinity of the first homestead.

(4) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon said land.

The term "vicinity" used above is meant to indicate the same township or an adjoining or cornering township.

A settler who avails himself of the provisions of Clauses 2, 3, or 4, must possess 30 acres of land in the township in which he is settling, and have besides 30 acres subsistence land.

Every homesteader who fails to comply with the requirements of the homestead law is liable to have his entry cancelled, and the land may be again thrown open for entry.

Application for patent should be made at the end of three years, before the local agent, sub-agent, or Homestead Inspector. Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands, at Ottawa, of his intention to do so.

Information.—Newly arrived immigrants will receive at the Immigration Office, in Winnipeg, or at any Dominion Lands Office, in Manitoba or the Northwest Territories, information as to the lands that are open for entry, and from the officers in charge, free of expense, advice and assistance in securing land to suit them. Full information respecting the land, timber, coal and mineral laws, as well as respecting Dominion Lands in the Railway Belt in British Columbia, may be obtained upon application to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, Manitoba, or to any of the Dominion Lands Agents in Manitoba or the Northwest Territories.

JAMES A. SMART,

Deputy Minister of the Interior. N.B.—In addition to Free Grant Lands to which the regulations above stated refer, thousands of acres of most desirable lands are available for lease or purchase from railroad and other corporations and private firms in Western Canada.

SECOND HOMESTEADS

Many wrong ideas have been formed in regard to the right of a settler being entitled to a second homestead. The idea has got abroad in several instances of any settler being entitled to a second homestead. This is not the case. The only persons entitled to a second homestead are those homesteaders who had either received their patent or were entitled to apply for it, on or before June 2, 1880. This gives the very early settlers only, the right to a second homestead.
